Employment Guide— Questioning Applicants

Equal Employment Opportunity for All

PURPOSE OF THE GUIDE

It is illegal for employers, labor unions or employment agencies to discriminate against persons because of their race, color, religion, sex, national origin, disability, age, military status or ancestry. Under the Law, employers are prohibited from eliciting information from applicants, prior to employment, which would indicate the applicant's race, color, religion, sex, national origin, disability, age, military status or ancestry unless the employer is required to elicit such information pursuant to a bona fide Affirmative Action program or under order from a state, federal or local FEP agency.

This brochure is not a complete definition of what can and cannot be asked of applicants. It attempts to answer the questions most frequently asked concerning the Law. The Law is not intended to prohibit employers from obtaining all the information about applicants that is clearly job related and which cannot be used for discriminatory purposes.

The Law does not restrict employers from defining qualifications necessary for satisfactory job performance, but it does require that standards of qualifications for hiring be applied alike to all persons regardless of race, color, religion, sex, national origin, disability, age, military status or ancestry.
